A dialogue between the U.S. and the representatives of the Palestinian people will be a very beinful development... We must be certain that the provialons of the Camp David framework... are carried out, There must be a genuine transfer of authority to the Palestinians in their land. Without that the problem will remain unsolved." But Sadat did remind President Carter of his piedge that "the U.S. is committed without reservation to seeing the peace process through, un-tii all parties to the Arab-Israeli conflict are at peace."

Begin's speech was in many ways the most moving - certainly the most personalized - of the three. He recalled his parents who had perishalmost cracked as he declaimed in sonorous tones the words (In Hebrew) of Psalm 126.

Begin spoke of the peace treaty as "the cornerstone of cooperation and friendship" between Israel and Egypt. He, alone among the three leaders, did not dwell on the challenges and difficulties that etill lie ahead, nor refer to their common pledge to reach a comprehensive settlement that would embrace srael's other fronts.

There was, however, one commoo reference in all three addresses:

BEGIN, SADAT, CARTER SPEECHES ON BACK PAGE

It was Israel's first-ever peace treaty with a neighbouring Arab state.

The signing represented the dramatic culmination of 16 months of arduous negotiations beginning with Sadat's visit to Jerusalem in November 1977. All three men, during their remarks delivered at the simple but moving one-hour ceremony, stressed the significance of the occasion, but they also acknowledged the pitfalls on the road ahead.

Afterwards the Israeli and was seen singing along in Hehrew and later Carter in English. Sadat's lips did not move during the Egyptian anthem.

It was probably the last major occasion for the Egyptian anthem, since a new one bas been commissioned by Sadat and is expected to be released shortly.

The U.S., Israeli and Egyptian flags flapped in the steady breeze behind the three men under partly sunny skies. It was chilly outside with temperatures bovering in the mid-50s (about 13 centigrade).

Walting outside were bundreds of reporters. photographers, Sacret Service agents, pollcemen, other diplomats and officials, and general onlooksrs.

From everyone's reaction, the meeting had been a success. No one had any iliusions that a new love affair had developed. But fears that the months of often bittar haggling and mutual recriminations would prove insurmountable in allowing Sadat and Begin to establish some sort of at least ''correct'' relationship quickly vanished. The ice had been broken. Significantly, President Carter was not even there to help. But Sadat and Begin telephoned Carter in Texas to report on the progress.

From the embassy. Begin drove back to the Hilton. Outside the front entrance flew U.S., Israeli, Egyptian and UN flags. The premier convened special meeting of his ministers. Meeting in the prime minister's

When the signing concluded, Carter told Sadat and Begin: "Let's bave a handshake." They stood and clasped hands. They smiled and were clearly pleased. There was no embrace at that point, as bad been the case last September when they met to sign the Camp Davld framework agreements.

"I'm so proud of both of you,"
Carter said as he held hande together with the two men. Each man then read prepared speeches, sitting behind the microphones. They were each in-terrupted repeatedly by enthusiastic applause.

Begin's speech was considerably longer than the other two.

He put on a kipa as be began to read from Psalm 126 and continued to wear it for a brief period after tho ceremony as all three men strolled into the crowd to shake hands.

Sadat emhraced and kissed his wife Jlhan and his children as well as former secretary of state Henry Kissinger and later President Carter. He also hugged Defence Minister Ezer Weizman and poignantly - Weizman's son, Shaul, who had been injured during the war of attrition along the Suez Canal. But the president was polite and correct with Begin. They did not hug each other yeaterday.

Meshel warns of dangers of rapid Negev buildup

By Joshua Brilliant

Jerusalem Post Reporter TEL AVIV. - The Negev buildup will spur inflation and widen eocial gaps unless other econonic activity is curbed, Histadrut Sccretary-General Yeroham Meshel sald vesterday.

Addressing economic reporters bere, Meshel said that Prime Minister Meaahem Begin should conveae the employers and the Histadrut and plan how to prevent profiteering from the expected expeaditure of more than $3b.

There are not eaough workere in Israel to build the new airfields, West Bank settlements and low-cost homes in Israel, be explained. Contractors in the Negev would rather pay local workers $200 a day than import for eign labour, be said. Thus, Israeli workers will be enticed away from export-oriented factories. Their higher earnings will increase consumption and spur inflation. But because only a few workers will get the huge salaries, the social gape between them and the others will

"You can destroy a country by bringing prosperity to only a few."

In reply to a queetion, Meshel said be thinks it "is not good" to bring Egyptian workers to Ierael; but "this is a very delicate question (and) I don't want to go into it." Meshel cautioned against attempts to send large aumbers of Israeli technical experts to Egypt. Egyptian trade unionists (whom be has met through the International Confederation of Free Trade Unions) expressed coacern over a possible Israeli influx. "They don't want an invasion by an Israeli saivation army," be eaid.

Meebel also said be believed that in fiscal 1979/80 inflation might rise as high as 70 per cent. The Histadeut is demanding an increase in the costof-living allowance and fully linked income tax brackets. At present the income tax brackets are pegged to 70 per cent of the Index, so employees find theemeelvee la higher brackets just because they receive compensation for price rises. In its struggle with the government over this issue, the Histadrut may wage selective strikes but will not paralyse the economy by calling a general strike, he added.

A spokesman for Callaghan told The Jerusalem Post yesterday that be had seen "no trace of any such request." Israeli sources also deny knowledge of any such "dramatic approach" and tend to believe that there is nothing of substance in the report. Callaghan has kept in close touch with both Israel Premter Menahem Begin and Egyptlan President Anwar Sadat eince the Middle East peace negotiations got under way and has urged everyone to give it a chance. On the other hand, he is well aware of the damage which could be caused to Britain and its standing in Arah countries, wrote Dickic.

There have been earlier reports that Israel has itself directly up-pronebed the British authorities about the availability of North Sea oli. The first feelers were put out more than a year ago but did not receive great cncouragement.

According to Israell experts, however, North Sea oli is the wrong type for Israel's needs and would have to go through an expensive process before it could be of real usc. Furthermore, it is pointed out, the oil is comparatively expensive,

Soggy Jerusalem unwarmed by signing

The heavy cold rain that sporadically snarled traffic and soaked pedestrians in the empital yesterday seemed to match too well n sombre mood of uncertainty and exhaustion at the end of a 31-year wait for a peace treaty with an Arnb

The lousy weather began at dawn with heavy thunderciaps over the city's centre announcing the historic day. While the media were filled with an exuberance over what should have been Israel's biggest story since the founding of the stete. Jerusalem reeldents seemed bewildered by their own lack of enthusiasm.

Newspaper vendere, huddled under plastic awnings along the city's main streets, seemed more ionely than ever as they shouted out the "Signing Today" headlines. Few people paused as they hurriedly threw down some coins and stuffed the newspapers into their estchele. They seemed to be buying the newspapers, or listening to the radio reports from Washiagtoa, out of a cense of duty rether than excitemeat.

In cafes, the treaty signing was discussed. But drinks on the house — common during the historic visit to Jerusajem of Egyptian President Anwar Sadat 16 months ago - were not offered. Instead, a tired and news-entiated clientele talked about other times. "We danced in the street whoa the state was

"It's the same now. We don't know what will be. But if you ask me, even if I was younger, I wouldn't feel like dancing," his grey-haired companion said. "Sometimes I just feel like going to aleep, and when I wake up, it will all be over and everything will be different. His wife, Michal, stepped out of the kitchen and, wiping ber hands on her apron, said "It's an anticlimax. Now it's only for the politicians.'

Even the planned celebrations seemed less than spontaneous. Unprecedented security at the Western Wall was slated for last night's peace prayer raily. But the few ecattered countenances of U.S. President Jimmy Carter, Premier Menahem Begin and President Anwar Sadat were unnoticed by the city's residents scurrying through the rain.

Jerusalem'e Plaza Hotel scheduled a party at the next door Indspendence Park, which was to include Arab musicians, beliy dancers, and Isrnell folksinging and dancing. But grey ekies and a cold wind dulled the festivities' impact.

Kurds win concessions from Teheran

TEHERAN (AP). — The army released 97 hostages being held captive in the Kurdish capital of Sanandaj, newspapers reported here yesterday.

The army took the hostages during fighting last week with Kurdish nationalists, who had taken over most of the town and surrounded the army barracks. Some 200 persons were reported killed and many more wounded during the siege.

As part of a peace agreement announced on Sunday, a Kurd has been. appointed governor general of Kur-distan for the first time; a Kurdish committee has been given authority administrators in Sanandaj; and the Kurdish language is to be taught in provincial schools.

In another development yesterday, 50 more officials of the shah's secret police were arrested. The Foreign Ministry also announced that 241 staff members, including 38 ambassadors, have been fired.

Teheran's two English-language newspapers and ene Frenchlanguage newspaper announced they are to cease publication. The "Teheran Journal," "Kayhan

Bonn offers aid for Amman airport

BONN (AP). — West Germany is prepared to effer technical assistance to the Jordanian government in improving Amman's air-port, Transport Minister Kurt Gecheldle said yesterday.

Gaebeldle told Jerdanian Transpert Minister Ali al-Suheimat that the Bonn government will send a team of experts to offer advice on modernizing the existing airport and to determine whether the present location is suitable for an ultra-modern facility.

Suheimat, on an official visit to West Germany, also reported on progress made in modernizing the Jordanian railway system and the port of Akaba. According to West German sources, the Jordanian minister said the Amman government had been experiencing dif-ficulties in recruiting enough trained personnel to operate the railroad efficiently. The West German govern-ment bas allocated 133 millien marks for expanding Joradan's rail system and has antherised a DM50m, credit for the Akaba harbour project.

I regard it as a duty and an honour to express here our profound esteem to the noble Egyp-tlan people, which has decided to direct its steps and apply its energies to the creative future and to leave the bitterness and suffering of the past to be swept away for ever by the waters of the Nile to the great sea.

The Egyptian people has done this under the leadership and inspiration of Mohammed Anwar el-Sadat, who has succeaded, by his boid actions and his farsightedness, in writing a naw and brillant page in the history of his paople and the entire area.

forts to the achievement of this sacred goal.

The two nations have been assisted by a third party, the President of tha United States, Mr. Jimmy Carter. who has spared no trouble and effort in order to enable the parties to over-coms difficult and complex problems. At times it appeared as if we had reached s blind ailey, but the strong and sincere will of the peoples drove the chariot of peace forward towards the final goal.

Ladles and gentlemen, the peace treaty that will be signed this evening is a historic event, but peace is a continuous process. It has to be built with endless patience through reciprocal compromise, abandoning previous ways of thought to which we have been accustomed for decades. The time has come for the great and historic sulha, the recorciliation, between the Semitic peoples. The time has come for the peaceful meeting between the Arab nstional movement and the national movement of the Jewish people.

From this pisce I appeal to the honourable Arab kings and presidents to hearken to the footsteps of history, which sound a new music today. This region has tried the paths of hostillty and war. That way has solved nothing; it bas only multiplied devastation and blood, graves and ruins. The new way. although it is not free from obstacles, is deetined to produce a solution to the problems and lead the great Arab nation forward to a future of happiness and creativity, The caravan of psace is on the march. Let us not cast stones at it: on the contrary, take your placs in and give it your blessing - and he that blesses shall be blessed from Heaven. The younger generations are entitled to know and fael that their lives will no longer be sacrificed in endless and senseless battles. They are entitled to know and feel that a new horizon, full of hope and happiness, opens before them.

AND TO MY BROTHERS, the Arab inhabitants of Israel, ist me say: You, who have been living in Israel as equal citizens for over 30 years.

you know our country and its institutions; you are an integral part of them. You know the people who live in Israel and its sincere yearning for peace. You yourselves have prayed for peace all these years.

You have it in your power to play an honourable and important part in the creation of a fitting atmosphere for peace. Part of the disquiet that has been your lot is due to the state of war that has always relgned between Israel and her neighbours. With the coming of ceace this dis-quiet, too, will be removed. You are a firm bridge to peace. I am confident that your distinguished qualities and your great energies will find new and constructive channels in the new era of peace.

At this hour I esil upon all the pop-ulation of the West Bank and the Gaza Strip to open their hearts and to look forward with hope and optimism to the new move. The oeace traaty with Egypt has not neglected you. It has been agreed between the parties that, in the framework of autonomy, you ahail olay a practical part in the determination of your future and fate. You have an important part to pisy in the building of psace. Not the rule of one peopls over another, but mutual understanding and cooperation. The bitter past must give way to a hopeful future, for the saka of a better life for your children and grandchildren.

LET US WORK TOGETHER for a future of construction and not deatruction; planting and not cutting down; prosperity, not poverty; creation, not devastation.

If the will exists, all those words will be transformed into a living and substantial reality.

I pray to the Creator to plant in our hearts this will, for He answars those

The National Archives has some treaties with the Soviet Union on which the signers bave initialled each page — a practical problem whan the treaty is very long and in two languages.

The typed text of the treaty (if time permita, treatisa are sometimes printed before being algned) will be the final reference: in casas of divergence between the Arabic and Hebrew versions, the English text will prevail.

For the signing a bistoric mahogany table used for some notable treatles in the past was dusted off. It was used in 1898 for the treaty ending the Spanish-American Pact, which condemned war as a means of settling international disputes; in 1972 for the signing of a part of the first Sait agreement; and in 1976 for a treaty with the Soviet Union on the peaceful use of atomic

Nothing special was planned in terms of pens and ink, except to "assure that the signature will dry immediately — we don't want any blots on our treaties." Rovine ex-plained. "Otherwise, there is no set procedure. Sometimes the peus are kept as souvenirs — or people just take them as souvenirs - and sometimes thay don't."

In this age of jet-propelled diplomacy the physical form of treaties bas changed. But this process began long ago - in 1873, as a matter of fact, when Hamilton Fish, President Grant's U.S. Secretary of State, discovered bow much it cost to use skippet boxes, elaborate containers for sealing wax, to ensure the integrity of a document.

WITHIN THE ARCHIVES, where Gustafson presides over some 10,000 historic American traatlea and other international agrecments, be recalla stories from the past. The Treaty of Versailles, for example - Woodrow Wlison's dipiomatic masterpiece and a very bulky document, since it was the founding charter of the Leagus of Nations — took a long time to find its way to the archivea.

"Woodrow Wilson took it home with him when his administration : ended, Gustafaon says," and for a while nobody noticed that it was gone. Then Harding's secretary of state, Charles Evans Hughes, couldn't find it, and he asked Wilson about it. Wilson said yes, he had it and would be glad to return it if they would aend a messenger for it and give him a receipt."

For another momentous international agreement, the Atlentic Charter, there is no official, signed copy at all, though there is one

"The text was worked out but (Franklin D.) Roosevelt on a sbip off the coast of Newfoundland, then the text was radioad to Washington and issued in the form of a press release." Gustafson savs.

But Rooseveit and Churchill never got around to putting a copy on paper and algning it. Later, a young naval aide who had access to both Roosevelt and Churchill printed copy and had both of them

'His name is George Elzey, he is now the president of the American Red Cross and he cwas the only rim ed copy of the Atlantic Charter."

NBA West race tightens

NEW YORK (AP). — Suddenly it's the wiid, wiid West in the National Basketball Association with just 614 games separating the top seven teams, one of which won't make the playoffs.

Seattle bas the beet mark in the conference, 48-27, following Sunday'e 111-101 victory over Kansas City. The Denver Nuggets climbed to within one-half game of Kansas City hy rallying to heat the Los Angeles Lakers 123-113 on Sunday.

Portiand, which lost to Milwaukee 122-110 in overtime on Sunday night, now finds itself the odd team out in the West race. The Blazers are onehaif game behind surprising San Diego in the battle for the sixth and finai piayoff spot.

In other games on Sunday, the Phoenix Suns beat the Golden State Warriors 111-95, the Washington Buliets topped the Detroit Pistone 118-107, the Indiana Pacers defeated the San Antonio Spurs 121-113, the Boston Celtics downed the Philadelphia 78ers 103-94 and the New Jersey Nets heet the Chicago Bulls 99-98.

Seattie guard Gue Wiiiiame matched hie career high with 38 points as the Sonice won their fifth in Denver's Charlie Scott scored a season-high 28 points against his former Los Angeles teammates. But it was David Thompson who keyed a third-period eurge with 9 points as the Nuggets crased a 6-point halftime deficit with a 48-point quarter. Brian Winters scored 7 of his 24 points in overtime as Milwaukee outscored Portiand 17-5 to win only its seventh gams on the road this Phoenix outscored undermanned Golden State 16.2 in a 51/2-minute

upset TA Hapoel

By STEVE KAPLAN Post Sports Reporter

Ramat Gan Hapoel's basketball team gained a dramatic, come-frombehind victory on Monday night at Yad Eilahn, heating Tel Aviv Hapoei, 88-78, to even the best of three eemi-final playoff series at one win for each team.

After losing its first game against Tel Aviv last week by a 77-74 score Ramet Gan Hapoel badly needed a win to keep its championship hopes alive. Ramet Gan came out strong and heid an early 20-14 lead, but Tel Aviv rallied behind the strong rebounding of Bob Fleischer and John Willis. The Tel Avivians went into the locker room at halftime with a 41-36 lead and had the game well under control.

The two teams will meet for the third and deciding game of the series this Thursday at Yad Eliahu with the winner going on to face Tel Aviv Meccabi for the league championship.

Ramat Gan cagers | Overseas players signing-up for J'lem tennis competition

By JACK LEON . Poet Sports Reporter

TEL AVIV. - A dozen overseas piayers, including entries from Malta and India, have so far registered for the Israel Tennie Association's (ITA) 10th International Spring Circuit, which opens in Jerucalem on April 9. Alco due is former longtime Rumanian Davie Cup racquet Petre Marmureanu, for what will be an unprecedented ninth visit here during the past decade.

The circuit, consisting of four tournaments, will be worth nearly $7,500 in prize money. However, the cash awards are limited to men's competition only, in accordance with a decision made months ago when the event was planned. This ruling now appears particularly unfortunate, as the women'e entry looks like being coneiderably etronger than the Thirty-five years ago on March 24 Orde Wingate, a British general, died in a plane crash in Burma. His loss was deeply felt in Israel. Martin Sieff ex-

the establishement of alite Jewish commando units as the spearhead of the eventual Jewish army, whose creation be foresaw.

Wingate was given his chance by his commanding officers in the spring of 1938. The Arab rebellion in Palestine was bewildering the largest military concentration in the British Empire and was having a disastrona impact on British prestige throughout the Middle East. Wingate was given permission to set up and train his famous Special Night Squads, despite the "political undesirability" of giving Jews guns as far as the British were concerned. Never more than 150-strong at any one time, the SNS were recruited from Hagana kibbutzniks and included British NCOs (Wingate had a preference for men with Scottish and Nnrthern Irieb fundamentalist Protestant backgrounds). Their main period of activity was from May to September, 1938, during which they bad a shattering sffect on the rebellion.

Wingste took his military doctrines and training procedures, straight from the Bible. His military models were Joshus; Gideon, and David. From them, he learnt the importance of always taking the offensive, of always relying on an elite group of soldiere spiritually motivated and trained to the hilt, of attacking by night, of travelling light and fast, and of intimately knowing the land his soldiers fought over. He took from Oliver Cromwell the watchword: Know what you fight for and love what you know."

AS PART OF a general tendency to belittle him as a "wild man," British military historians bave argued that Wingate's role in bringing the Arab rebellion to an end has been much exaggerated. It is certainly true that after be left and the Special Night Squade stopped operating, reorganized British forces under Generals Sir Richard Haining and Sir John Dill, backed by a highly ef-ficient intelligence operation, had great success in breaking the back of the terrorist gangs and rounding them up. However, Wingate's squads had started operating at the nadir of Jewish and British military fortunes — and they not only dealt devastating blows to Arah morals, but also ehowed the way for future military operatione. The British administration, alarmed at Wingate's extrems Zionism and close contacts with Zionist leaders, pulled him out of Palestine. He never returned. During World War II, there was a standing rule in the War Office that he should never be posted there again. But the seeds be had sown were already sprouting. Among the young sobras who had served in the Special Night Squads were Yigal Alion and Moshe Dayan. The tactics and principles Wingate taught were enthusiastically embraced by Yitzhak Sadeh and hie Paimahniks and came to gulde the Israel Army for over 20 years.

Wingate himself was determined to come back. Addressing his friends in the stilted Hebrew he had tought himself in the library of Kibbutz Ein Harod, his pockets filled as usual with a pistol, a flask of whiskey, and a Bible, be told them: 'I leave you with a heavy heart. But rest assured that the day will come when I shall return to you and we shall fight together for the common cause."

When war came, he was taken under the wing of General Sir Edmund Ironside, Chief of the Imperial General Staff, and then of Winston Churchill himself. Wingate ross from captain to major-general in five years. He organized and led small-ecale units to shatter against enormous odds — Italy's East African Empire in 1941 and put a somewhat bewildered Emperor Haile Selsassie back on his Ethioplan throne.

Wingate'e 1943 "Chindit" commando operation behind the Japanese lines in Burma suffered heavy casualties, but caused heavy distributions will paved the way for a larger operation the following year; when he died.

Although still the subject of intense controversy among British scholars, Wingate's second Chindit campaign is generally considered by Japanese historians to have been of pivotal importance in deciding the DALLIE or impnai Imperial Army was finally driven back from the gates of India and suffered its greatest land defeat in 2,600

The unidentifiable remains of Orde Wingate were buried with the American crew of bls plane in Washington's Arlington National Cemetery. His death was one of those rare moments that might be said with confidence in have changed the course of history. Had he lived, there is no doubt that he would have strived to fulfil his dearest ambition - to lead a Jewish army in battle. A fitting dream for the man they called hayedid — "The Friend."

Lea Levavi describes an art show for the blind and sighted More than what meets the eye

BLINDNESS is a most unlikely subject for an exhibition in an art gallery. But that is what Halm Maor, a 28-year-old kibbutznik artist and art teacher has produced.

The works, on display at the Kibbutz Art Gallery (25 Rehov Hoz) until Saturday, are designed to appeal, in different ways, to both blind and sighted visitors.

Most of the worke can be appreciated by touch. All - even photographs and other purely visual forms - have braille inscriptions. And for blind visitors who do not use brallie, tape-recorded catalogues and explanations are available.

Maor is particularly interested in conceptual art and the relationships between forms of communication, which means that many of the works require explanation.

MAOR SAID invitations to the exhibition were sent to every blind person in Israel, but only a handful had attended since the exhibition opened on March 12.

In addition to the exhibit itself, the gallery has organized a series of lectures on various aspects of

Dr. Abraham Benjamio, a blind psychologist, opened the series with general introduction to the subject. He said he had three fantasies: to be able to read any book be wished when and where he wished; to be able to drive, and to he able to see

Loss of Iranian market not critical, Soltam manager says

By MARY HIRSCHFELD derusalem Post Reporter

HAIFA. - "Losing our Iranian market. is not the catastrophe everybody is talking about," Soltam general manager Ya'akov Lior told The Jsrusalem Post this week." We have coped with worse crises in the past and will also find our way now."

Speculation about the company's future started s few weeks ago, following reports that some 500 employees had been dismissed as a result of the suspension of exports to Iran. "This is not true. We bave let go some 170 employees until now, most of them temporary workers. and it le regrettable that the whole matter became public," sald Lior. Our businees is not a "steady stream" one, he explained. The Industry has always fluctuated between periods of intense activity and those of virtusl standstill. Scitam expanded two quickly, as orders from Iran grew bigger. "What we have to do now is to trim some of our lines and our personnel, so that we can go back to more realistic proportions. But again, this is not an unusual event for us."

Ys'akov Lior was appointed to Soltam s year and a half ago, following a career of 35 years as manager at the Military Industries. A lifetime of dealing with security matters taught him how to shelter the Yokne'am plant from indiscreet eyes. Unlike other companies in the trade, Soltam has no public relations office or spokesman, and does not enourselves to be bothered by rumours or react to them. Ours is such a sensitive business that anything we say may eventually turn out to be harmful," Lior sald.

Soltam was founded in 1950 by Solel Boneh and Tamoella, a Finnish group with multinational interests (bence the name Sol-Tam). It started as a low-profile plant with 200 workers, until three years later.

when the first big orders started arriving - from Germany.

"We now employ 2,580 persons, including production and engineering personnel" Lior told The Post. The company has reached an international-quality lavel and has been marketing its products in 40 countries. More than 80 per cent of last year's production went for export, and of this total some 17 per cent was bought by Iran."

The Iranian market did not open up until two or three years ago. This is why we ssy now that we have lived without it for so long, we shall overcome its loss without difficulties, Lior said. "In 1956, as a matter of fact, our weapons industry enffered a much worse crisis and we isarned to cope with it in due time also."

The best answer to the present situation is diversification. Soltam already manufactures stainless steel cooking pots and pans, which have been very successful. "Whatever we produce has found its way in the local market," Lior said, but "strong international competition has kept us from markets abroad."

One Item has been conspicuously missing here: a Soltam pressure cooker. Yet this won't be for long, hecause the company is already studying the euhject and will soon conduct a market research to know how the public feels about it. At present, Soltam productioo lines include complete weapon systems of guos and mortare together with sight instruments and accessories and various types of am-monition for them, ranging from high explosive, illuminating, train-ing and smoke projectiles. For the civilian market it manufactures sutomotive parts, track chains and cylinders and has not long ago launched a new line of duplicators. Soltam was a Finnish-controlled company until two years ago, when it was purchased by the Koor group. It was about then that business grew

Egg prices to drop today

By MICHAL YUDELMAN Jerusalem Post Reporter

TEL AVIV. - The price of eggs is expected to drop by an average of 30 per cent today, Tnuva spokesman Mordechal Hofsteter predicted yesterday. He said that since the subsidiee on basic foodstuffs, including eggs, were cancelled recently, there has been a major sccumulation of surplus eggs. As a result, of this surplus the organizations, involved in the marketing of eggs have agreed to the government's demand to lower pricee at the wholesale level. The demand has been supported by the government's readiness to absorb the egg surplus. Hofsteter said the new lower agg prices will hardly cover the costs of chicken-feed and will also not cover the agricultural work invested by farmers. As a result, Hofsteter predicted heavy losses for colcken farmers. The spokesman also said that within a few months the charp decrease in production will create a severe shortage of eggs. This will require largescale egg imports and also cause local prices to rise. According to Hofsteter egg prices as of this morning will range from IL1.32 for the largest size (after IL2.05 yesterday) to IL0.80 for the small size (after IL1.11 yesterday).

The company's exports also advanced, rising to $3.2m. from $2.3m. Sunfrost's management estimated that overall sales will resch IL250m. this year. Exports should rise by some 25 per cent. to $4m.

These optimistic forecasts are based on a further penetration of the American msrket, where initial shipments were well received last year. Sales to Canada have doubled in the past year.

For s number of years Sunfrost bad difficulties selling locally, because israell housewives preferred to buy fresh vegetables. As time passed, however, local consumers hegan to appreciate the quality of the company's products, its easy-to-store features as well as its "quick food" convenience.

Loss to tourism as Canadian charter firm cancels plans to fly to Israel

By BARUCH SAVILLE Post Travel Reporter

TEL AVIV. - The buge Canadian charter company, Wardair, weeks before it was due to commence charter flights to Israel, has an-nounced that it was calling off the entire operation.

In Israel tourism circles the Wardair decision is seen as marking a serious decline in overall tourism from Canada. It is estimated that as a result some 12,000 to 15,000 charter passengers will be lost this year from that country.

According to initial comments from Canada, Wardair was said to feel that it could not compete on the route with El Al and that only a small market remained for it after the Israell national carrier took away "the cream of the Canadian market.''

Other sources said that an additional reason was Jordan's declsion to let its national airline, Alia, operate low-cost charters from Toronto to Amman. (This was predicted in the Travei Trends column on March 12.)

It is estimated that as a result of the cancellation of its charter flight Israel Wardair incurred losses running into two hundred thousand dollars, mainly in promotion costs.

El Al expands seating capacity of Boeing

EL AL HAS REDESIGNED the interior of one of its Boeing 747 to seat 470 passengers. The increased capacity will enable the airline to meet the heavy demand for space. This both applies to outgoing Israelis as well as to the anticipated increase in tourists coming bere after the signing of the Peace Treaty.

Another type Boeing, a 707, has also bad its seating plan changed to up capacity to 188 passengers, rather than the 160 as at present. This aircraft will be used for charter flights organized by El Al's Charter Services subsidiary.

With the 747 now designed to take three classes, El Al is sbortly ex-pected to introduce its long-awaited no-frills Holiday Class section.

The yield reflects the difference between the "theoretical" value of bonds — based on the date of issue and current Co-L indexes plus accumulated interest — and the actual market price. It is based on the assumption that future Co-L index increases will be zero. A negative yield indicates bonds sold at a premium, a positive figure bonds sold at o discount!

The turning point

THE SIGNING ceremony is now ended. Such pomp and circumstance as attended it are faded. Peace hetween Egypt and Ierael, mortal adversaries for over a generation, is now a fact, though for the moment only on paper. The order of the new day ls sober application to the arduous task of turning it into a

This will take some time. The daily lives of Israelis will not suddenly be set aglow with the kind of majesty that some of them still recall having felt when statehood was proclaimed nearly 31 years ago.

In the short run, the advent of peace will for the most part spell higher prices, beavier taxes, and perhaps longer reserve duty to help the army keep its time-table for a pullback from

Instead of beating its swords into ploughshares, Israel will be called upon to strengthen its defences. For while it is still too early to write off the southern front as a possible theatre of war, it is not a minute too early to take measures to ward off threats to the east and north.

The threat, as they see it, of Egypt finally and irrevocably opting out of the offensive Arah coalition has stirred the rejectionists among Israel's neighbours into a fresh frenzy of activi-

In truth, of course, the reason Egypt's President set out alone on his journey to peace with Israel was because neither Syria's Assad nor Jordan's Hussein would join him on that momentous enterpriee.

Unlike his brethren, Sadat came to realize that the peace he, for one, eorely needed to lift up his people had to encompass something better than non-committal non-belligerence. Sharply hreaking with a tradition informed by a genocidal impulse, Sadat therefore proposed a peace that is defined. In ultimate terms, as friendship and good-neighbourliness.
It remains a complete antithesis to the "comprehensive" peace seemingly espoused by the rejectionists. Will President Sadat stand up to his Arah foes? That is inevitably a major concern for Israelis.

Admittedly the pressures brought to bear on the Egyptian leader are enormous, and they have at times caused him to waver somewhat in his resolve. There is the threat of a cut-off in financial ald hy the oil-rich countries, notably Saudi Arabia; there is the possibility of almost total political isolation in the Arah world; and there is the danger of upheaval by Khomeinistyle Muslim fundamentalists.

If Sadat remains firm — and his courage has been amply demonstrated — he will find compensation enough for any Arab losses in the peace with Israel and in his alliance with the U.S. (provided, needless to say, that the U.S. itself does not prematurely start chasing the chimera of overall settlement). If he does not, he may undermine the very structure of the peace. Like Anwar Sadat, Menahem Begin, too, has his share of home-grown rejectionists who speak his erstwhile rhetoric of il-

Israel's Premier ominously reverts to that language when, for example, he refers to a peace made not by the State of Israel, which is the case, but by the Land of Yisrael.

The hope of peace may be blown to smithereens if Israel's rejectionists are let loose over the Land.

It has taken Israel and Egypt 16 hectic months to negotiate the peace treaty, with America's invaluable assistance. Much remains to be settled; indeed some of the toughest and most vital lasues, and not the autonomy alone, are only now to be tackled. As it is, the treaty may bave in some eyes — perhaps also because of the merciless kicking around it has been receiving on all sides on its way to the signing — a lean and hungry

Now it is up to Egypt and Israel to flesh it out, and to make it sufficiently resilient to withstand all assault. For a new era of peace, dreamed about for so long, beckons to both peoples. With resolve and good will it can be made to illuminate the future.

CAIRO. — Separate peace: comprehensive cettlement. The dicbotomy has been with us ever since President Anwar Sadat'e visit to Jerusalem. And it will continue to pre-occupy us beyond this week's treaty-signing, through the talks on the autonomy, through the talks on the "permaneot status" of the West Bank and Gaza, for as long as one can contemplats.

In fact, it did not originate with Sadat's visit, just as the "peace process" itself did not begin then, but rather back in 1975, at the time of the Sinai II agreement.

Already then there were cries of "eeparate peace" and "betrayal" from the Arah hard-line states.

And, of course, they were right to an extent. Former Prime Minister Yltzhsk Rahin, who, with U.S. Secretary of State Henry Kissinger and Sadat laid the foundations of the peace we are now celebrating, used to speak openly of the political and strategic imperative of negotiating with Egypt first. It was only when Egypt responded, cautiously in 1975 then dramatically in 1977, and was assailed by its sister Arah states, that it became tactically imperative not to talk in euch terms.

The Kissinger-Rabin Egypt-first etrategy has been eucceeefui because it was anchored in, and aided by, objective reality: Egypt's critical eccio-economic need for eace; Egypt'e martial prowess at the start of the 1973 war, which erased ite earlier shame and enabled it to negotiate confidently; America'e newly perceived need to bolster a pro-Western axis in the Middle East; Sadat'e ouster of the Soviets and his

There have been propitioue catalysts, too, that have sped the peace process towards success. Begin'e ascent to power meant that Israei was more forthcoming on the Sinai than it probably would have heen under Labour.

A man in a position to know once said that Labour — and Rabin in par-ticular — was "obsessed" by Sharm e-Sheikh. The party'e "oral law." requiring that Sharm and a land link to it he kept at all costs, was not an opening position for negotiation: it was meant eeriouely. And can anyone imagine Ylgai Ailon as foreign minister consenting to remove the Rafah cettlements with Menahem Begin, not just Geula Cohen, in opposition?

And a cloud with a silver lining was the fall of Iran.

Thie bad been preceded hy numeroue Soviet-Inepired encroachmente eisewhere on the periphery of the Middle East; hut it was Iran that eet the warning lights flashing even among the trendy liberals on Capitoi Hill. The Administration was galvanized into one final concentration of superpower energy and prestige to capitalize on the fast-receding success of Camp David. And Congressional money was demonstratively jingled in readiness to fund the effort.

The Egypt-first strategy, then, has proved to he the wise, fortunate and successful course for Israel, Egypt and the U.S. Soon, as we all know, the three parties will embark on the next phase, all avowedly determined to show that Egypt-first does not mean Egypt-last, but, on the contrary, is the only poselhie way towarde a 'comprehensive

Said in English, It does not cound as historic — as metaphysical — as it deserves to sound. "Egypt," after all, is a word that is only as old as the English ianguage itself, whereas what it denotes is so much older. Pronounced in Hebrew, Mitzrayim coojures up, for me at least, the crucible of Jewry and Judaism.

If President Sadat'e original proposal that the treaty be signed on Mt. Sinal was a publicity stunt for suckers — then I am a eucker.

Excerpts from Sadat, Begin, Carter speeches at ceremony

President Carter, dear friends: This is certainly one of the happiest moments in my life. It is a historic turning point of great significance for all peace-loving nations.

Those among us who are endowed with vision cannot fail to comprebend the dimensions of our sacred mission. The Egyptian peo-pie, with their heritage and unique awareness of history, have realised from the very beginning the meaning and value of this endeavour. In all the steps I took, I was not performing a personal mission. I was merely expressing the will of a na-tion. I am proud of my people and of beionging to them.

Today, a new dawn is emerging out of the darkness of the past. A new chapter le heing opened in the bietory of co-exietence among nations, one that is worthy of our spiritual values and civilization, Never hefore had men encountered such a complex dispute which is highly charged with emotions. Never before, did men need that much courage and imagination to confroot a single challenge.

Never before had any cause generated that much interest in all four corners of the globe.

Men and women of good will have laboured day and night to bring about this happy moment. Egyptians and Israelis alike pursued their sacred goal undeterred by difficulties and complications. Hundreds of dedicated individuals on both eides have given generously of their thought and effort to translate the cherished dream into a living reality. But the man who performed the miracie was President Carter. Without any exaggeration, what he did constitutes one of the greatest achievemente of our time. He devoted hie skill, hard work and, above ail his firm belief in the ultimate triumpb of good against evil to ensure the eucceee of our mission.

To me, be has been the beet companion and partner along the road to peace. With his deep sense of justice and genuine commitment to human rights, we were able to surmount the most difficult obstaclee. There came certain moments when hope was eroding and retreating in the face of crisis. However, President Carter remained unshaken In his confidence and determination. He is a man of faith and compassion.

Before anything else, the signing of the peace treaty and the exchanged letter is a tribute to the spirit aod ability of Jimmy Carter.

We are also beartened by the underetanding of bundrede of thousanda of Israelis who remained unwavering in their commitment to peace. The continuation of this spirit is vital to the coronation of our ef-

We realise that difficult times lay abead. The signing of these documents marks only the heginning of peace, but it is an indispensable start. Other steps remain to be taken without delay or procrastination. Much will depend on the success of these eteps. We are all committed to pursue our efforts until the fruits of the comprehensive eettiement we agreed upon are chared hy all parties to the conflict. President Carter once said that "The United Statee is committed without reservation to eeeing the peace process through, until all parties to the Arab-Israeli conflict are at peace."

We value such a pledge from a leader who raised the hanners of morality and ethics as a substitute for power politice and opportunism.

The steps we took in the recent past will eerve Arab vital interests. The liberation of Arah land and the reinstitution of Arab authority in the Weet Bank and Gaza would certainly enhance our common strategic in-

While we take the initiative to protect these interests, we remain faithful to our Arah commitment. To us, this is a metter of destioy. Pursuing peace is the only aveoue which is compatible with our culture and Let there be oo more despair or loce of falth. Let no mother iament the loss of her child. Let no young man wasta his life on a conflict from which no one benefits.

During the past 30 years, Israei and Egypt have waged war. For the past 16 months, these two great nations have waged peace. Today we celebrate victory — not of a bloody military campaign, but of an inspiring peace campaign. Two leaders who will loom large in the history of nations - Anwar al-Sadst and Menahem Begin - have conducted this campagin with all the courage, tenacity, brilliance and inspiration of any generals who ever led men and machines onto the field of battle. At the end of this campaign the soil of the two lands is not drenched with flowing blood. The countryside of both lands are free from the litter and carnage of waeteful war. Mothers in Egypt and Israel are not weeping today for their children fallen in ceneciese battle. The dedication and determination of theee two world statesmen have borne fruit. Peace has come. .
